In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but, it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

DENBIGH.

On Friday last we had the fiercest windstorm in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants of this part of the country. A large frame barn on the farm of Mr. Adolph Fritsch was blown down and his brother, August, who is visiting with him, was seriously, but not fatally hurt by some of the wreckage falling on him. Another frame barn on the adjoining farm belonging to Mr. Otto Kliem was also blown down as well as a large shed and the roof of one of his stables. Both large barns had basement stables under them which were left standing and the live stock therein was not injured, but Mr. Kliem's farming machinery which was on one of his barn floors was badly damaged. A barn on Mr. Wm. Warlick's place was blown down, one heifer was killed and one horn of one cow was knocked off. The roof of Thos. Flake's dwelling-house was blown off and the barn on Ed. Turwood's place was moved several feet. Other losses will probably yet be reported.
 Mr. J. S. Lane has just finished drawing lumber from his sawmill to Caldwell Station before the sleighing broke up and has been at the station to load it on the cars for further shipment, but he will likely have to leave quite a few sawlogs in the woods which he has cut for this springs sawing. Some of our farmers and local merchants are also behind with the teaming they yet intended to do.
 Miss Clara Berger and Mr. Wm. Rahm were quietly married on the 12th inst. As we have no residing minister yet Rev. Hugh McLean, of Matawatchan, performed the ceremony.
 Mr. Wm. J. Douglas has sold his farm of 375 acres to Mr. Robert Slater and has rented a 300 acre farm from Mr. E. Sallans.
 Miss Emma Kliem left for Ottawa to visit some friends and intends to enjoy life in the capital for a while before she returns home.

EASTER WAS QUIET.

Suffragettes Failed To Create a Single Sensation.

LONDON, March 25.—It was expected that the suffragists would make a startling coup in the Easter holidays,
but up to last evening any special
plan formed had not materialized.
An attempt to burn an empty house
at Beckenham was frustrated, and the incident at the labor conferences was the only development. The apprehensions of the authorities is evidenced in the precautions taken at Windsor Castle which, contrary to all precedent, was entirely closed to the public yesterday. Even the north terrace of St. George's Chapel, Royal Mews, usually open to the public, was barred, and a strong force of police and detectives was scattered in the park grounds.

Miller's Health Fails.

prisoner, R. C. Miller, is in failing health, while his wife is a victim of tuberculosis.

These facts, together with the feeling of his counsel that Miller has been punished sufficiently, will lead to the renewed efforts this week to secure his release.

Miller shows signs of his enforced
detention, and is said to be nervous.
He gives no indication, however, of making any statement by way of answering the question, failure to do

How Norway Deals With Divorce.

It is easier to obtain a divorce in Norway than in any other European country. If a married couple want to part, Norwegian law grants a divorce without inquiring into the reason, but as security that the step has been well thought over it provides that a year of separation must intervene between the application and the granting of divorce. The husband and wife have first to apply to a magistrate.
He sends them to the conciliation
board, and if this body cannot reconcile them they are granted a separation order. At the end of a year the ministry of justice is compelled to make the divorce final if asked to do so by either party.

LIBERALS ORGANIZE.

Ontario Clubs Hold a Convention and Banquet in Toronto.

TORONTO, March 25.—At their con-

from the Liberal clubs of the province

Liberal Club Federation of Canada."
Thirty-one organizations were represented at the convention and the banquet held at the Ontario Club in the evening was attended by over 150
guests.

The chair was occupied by John Lewis of Toronto until J. B. Marshall of Hamilton arrived. The following motion was then carried unanimously:

Moved by Mr. Lewis of Toronto, seconded by Mr. Waters of Brantford,
"Resolved that it is desirable to form a federation of Liberal Clubs and Canada Forward Clubs in Ontario for free co-operation in the advancement of the principles of Liberalism and for the discussion of all questions relating to the good government and development of Canada."

Another resolution calling for the establishment of a lecture bureau as an essential feature of the work of the federation was passed a moment later,
and the delegates then proceeded to elect the officers and adopt a constitution.

The following officers were elected:

BLIZZARDS IN NORTH

Severe Snowstorms Paralyze
Traffic in Northern Ontario.

Freight Business Has Been Almost at a Standstill as a Result of Heavy Wind and Snow—Provincial Railway Is Also Demoralized — Man Killed at Wahnipitae—Fort William
Also Cut Off.

NORTH BAY, March 25.—For a week past the C.P.R. has been waging
a desperate fight on the Lake Superior division with unusual snowstorms and blizzards of great severity. Traffic has been demoralized in the western end of the district and freight business has been almost at a standstill, passenger traffic affording a difficult problem, particularly on account of heavy immigrant travel. Yesterday the Lake Superior district between Cartier and Fort William was in the throes of a terrific blizzard, with snow falling in clouds and heavy wind.
Passenger trains are being held at terminals to prevent stalling where passengers would be subject to inconvenience and discomfort.

White River district seems to be the worst of the storm centre and not a wheel was in motion yesterday. In the White River yards snowdrifts were piled nine feet high.

Northern Ontario is also in the grip of the storm. King, Cochrane and Porcupine being visited with severe snowstorms yesterday, which played havoc with the T. & N. O.
Railway service at the North Bay end.
C.P.R. eastbound trains out of Fort William will be delayed possibly 24
hours.

Carl Carlson of Bigwood, on the Toronto-Sudbury C.P.R. line, was instantly killed at Wahnipitae Saturday

small mountains of snow. Trains from the east are late, some of them over

PICKED UP LIVE WIRE.

Cornwall Lad Electrocuted by Touching Power Line.

CORNWALL, March 25.—Patrick Kavanagh, a lad about ten years of age, son of Allan Kavanagh, butcher,
was electrocuted about seven o'clock
last night by touching the insulation
on a live wire. During the high wind, which prevailed here all afternoon, a large power wire, which furnishes electricity to two industries in the north end of the town, blew down and young Kavanagh, in attempting to pick it up, received a fatal shock.

Dr. Hamilton, coroner, deemed it inquest unnecessary.

Will Go To Belle Isle.

MONTREAL, March 25.—It is now an assured fact that Sir Rodolphe For-get's road, the Quebec & Saguenay has been sold to Mackenzie and Mann, with a Federal Government
bond guarantee, but it is also stated
on first rate authority that the Canadian Northern people will extend the system first to Tadoussac and finally to Belle Isle.

More Fighting In Mexico.

MONTEREY, Mex., March 25.—The rebels, who were repulsed in their recent attack on Saltillo, are now fort-fied at the town of Paredon, to the west of Monterey. They utilized train in their retreat from Saltillo.

The Government has despatched troops from both Saltillo and Monterey to engage the rebels in their new positions.

cal portrayal of stenographers by the movies as gum-chewers and wearers
of "rats" in their hair, is being circulated here. Already 3,000 names have been attached to it.

The campaign against what is considered as a libel upon the members of the stenographic profession is being conducted by a committee of girls, with Miss Louise Lawrence as convenor.

concerned in the riot on Dec. 10

Flood Threatens Guelph.

GUELPH, March 25.—The River Speed is on another rampage and threatens to outdo the flood of last week, in fact, the water is much higher than it was last week, and is just about equal to what it was a year ago on Easter Sunday. The water in the river began to rise about ten o'clock yesterday morning, and since then has been rising steadily.
It rose a couple of feet in as many
hours.

Galt Industries Crippled.

GALT, March 25.—For the third time this season the Grand River has overflowed its banks. Following the rain of Sunday night, the water rose steadily until yesterday afternoon it encroached on adjoining lands, flowing over retaining walls and flooding
the basements of industrial plants and residences along the banks. Several plants were forced to shut down.

THREE WILL TESTIFY.

Members of British Cabinet To Give Statement on Marconi Charges.

LONDON, March 25.—Lloyd-George,
Chancellor of the Exchequer; H. L.
Samuel, Postmaster-General, and Sir Rufus Isaacs, Attorney-General, will give evidence at to-day's meeting of the Marconi committee. A private meeting of the committee yesterday
considered the evidence in The Matin libel case and decided to invite the Ministers concerned to attend the inquiry and to assist the committee in arriving at the facts. Sir Rufus Isaacs will make a full statement regarding his position, and will afterwards be questioned by members of the committee.

It should be stated that Sir Rufus and Mr. Samuel at the commencement of the committee's inquiry,
months ago, offered to give evidence
as soon as desired, but the committee decided to reserve the Ministers' evidence to a later stage of the inquiry.

There is the keenest public interest in to-day's meeting not only because it concerns the question of the judgment of the Ministers in dealing with American Marconis, but because of the bearing it is likely to have on Sir Rufus Isaacs' future, since it has become evident that a successor to Lord Alverstone must soon be appointed. Sir Rufus had generally been looked upon as the next Lord Chief Justice, but it is now thought that although Ministerial probity may be upheld his chance for the post has gone.

Children and Influences.

The reason why children so easily contract the mien, gestures and habits of their surroundings is that they have no power of resistance. Everything outside them is stronger than themselves, and they have to borrow from all outward influences for their own growth; hence they are good,
cheerful and contented or bad, morose
and discouraged, just according to their surroundings. — Marenholtz-Bulow.

Its Kind.

tor should turn his attention to writing poetry?"

one of the drugs in the market."

A yellow frosting is made by beating them with fine sugar as you would

to harden than if the whites were used.

stored to normal whiteness by putting in a kettle of cold water, adding white soap shavings and lemon juice and letting come slowly to a boil. Rinse in tepid water, then blue water, and hang in the sun.

For Tangled Hair.

Many a beautiful head of hair has been cruelly and needlessly sacrificed
when a long and serious illness has left it in a seemingly hopeless mat
through which no fingers, however patient, can push their way. Then comes the fearful demand for scissors. Instead spread a towel smoothly over the pillow, lay the patient on her side,
have at hand a bottle of best alcohol,
take the matted hair and saturate thoroughly with the alcohol, then gently
draw it this way and that, and presently it will yield and admit your fingers.
Keep the hair thoroughly wet, and in a few minutes the long strands will be straightened out. Don't fear cold.
The spirits will have evaporated too quickly for that. Cologne will not serve.

Game For the Sewing Circle.

A workbasket as the first prize and a few accessories were the rewards in a parlor game played at a recent gathering of a sewing circle. The game was called "my lady's workbasket."
Each of the ladies was given a card
with a list of words, mostly nonsensical, printed thereon. The idea was to trans-pose the letters of each word to form
a word designating something belonging to a workbasket, a half hour being devoted to the pastime.

SOUTH LANARK
BYE-ELECTION

If the Liberals cut thirty three per cent. from Conservative majorities throughout the Provinces there would be a great accession of members to the Liberal side of the House. In South Lanark the late Col. Matheson's constituency, the Liberals at the recent bye-election did reduce the hostile majority by one third, and this too in spite of the fact that the constituency is one of the most consistently Tory in the whole province, and that since 1905 it has been allowed to go to them by acclamation. The Liberals in this case did not win the seat, but they have given real encouragement to their friends in many constituencies. If a majority of 900 can be pulled down to 600, it is looked upon as proof that the tide has begun to ebb from the Conservatives and to flow with the Liberals instead. With a leader like Mr. Rowell this change is inevitable. It is only a matter of time and events, both inside the Legislature and outside in the Province, make it look as if the time was not to be nearly as long as some people expected.

The detailed comparative figures of South Lanark elections follow:

	Liberal	Conservative	Con.
	Vote	Vote	Maj.
1899	1398	2195	795
1902	1201	2098	897
1905	674	1565	891
1908		Acclamation
1911		Acclamation
1813	1254	1865	611

The Dominion elections since redistribution have resulted as follows:

	Liberal	Conservative	Con.
	Vote	Vote	Maj.
1904	1185	2075	890
1908	1349	2108	759

FINAL TEMPERANCE POLICIES

It is not possible for the Temperance debate to continue during the whole of the session. Last week saw what was probably the close of the controversial side of the question for this year. It is now possible to examine the position of the two parties.

The Liberals are still standing firm with their policy of Abolish the Bar, which means the closing of all bars and prohibiting the sale of liquor in Clubs and the retaining of local option to wipe out the shops where the electors so decide. This course has been definitely endorsed by the Dominion Alliance.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, are making no temperance proposal of any kind. They have dropped their Abolish Treating idea of last session and now reply entirely on what they claim to be their strict enforcement of the present license laws.

Mr. Rowell in his last speech on the Abolish the Bar resolution, which was voted down by the Conservative majority, attacked the Government for going back on what they had urged last session, and read a number of extracts from The Pioneer, the Temperance paper, in 1911, 1912 and 1913, charging the Government with the failure to enforce the license laws thoroughly in many places. Mr. Rowell also made the direct charge that the Government was lined up for the Bar with the liquor interests and that it expected to be financed by them at the next general election. Sir James denied this vigorously, but Mr. Rowell declared that if the Prime Minister did not know it he was about the only person in the Dominion who

It is no mere coincidence of the great thinkers of whether in philosophy, science, literature or the arts, to be old men despite the fact that they were in man physical weaklings. Signify the fact that the majority began to think, began to expand minds along the lines in which ultimately achieved greatness were still young. There is no hint for parents.

Accustom him to things out for himself interest him in whatever it him to know. You need not that he will overtax his child's mind—and no man overtaxed by anything in which interest is taken.

The trouble with most of us we are not really interested in anything. We have interests, but they are diffuse, thin, do not grip us. That is why a few of us ever think sense of the term. AUTHORIZED STATE-MENT OF OPPOSITION

IN REPLY TO STATEMENT OF GOVERNMENT AS TO PRESENT POSITION OF THE ISSUE BETWEEN THE TWO PARTIES IN PARLIAMENT.

The present issue between the government and the opposition is clearly and easily defined.

The government is asking for a contribution of thirty-five million dollars out of the Canadian treasury to the Imperial navy under the pretence of an emergency. The discussion has shown that such an emergency does not exist, and it would seem that this is the first of periodical permanent contributions.

The policy of the Liberal party is the same as it ever was: a Canadian navy built (as far as immediately practicable,) equipped, maintained and manned in Canada; this policy is now in a concrete form before the House, Mr. Guthrie having moved an amendment still undisposed of that the $35,000,000 asked by the government "be expended in Canada in the construction for the first time took the ground on Saturday, 15th of March, that these amendments were out of order. The opposition resented this action of the Prime Minister as an unwarranted and unjustifiable attempt to gag free discussion, and these attempts at closing freedom of speech by partizan chairman were repeated all through the long day of Saturday.

NOT OPPOSITION'S FAULT.

If there has been a deadlock THE FAULT IS NOT ON THE PART OF THE OPPOSITION BUT ON THE PART OF THE GOVERNMENT. The opposition claim no more than the right of freedom of speech and of discussing a measure in which a principle of the highest importance is at stake.

The government have no mandate from the people to proceed with this measure, and three ministers were elected as direct opponents of naval assistance to Great Britain in any form. Notwithstanding this they have delayed all public business to force this measure unduly. The Banking Act makes no progress, no budget speech announcing a tariff policy has been made, while on only two occasions since the House opened have they asked for supply AND SUPPLY WAS AT ONCE GRANTED. Refusing thus to attend to these pressing matters of great importance to Canada they are trying to force up-practicable,) equipped, maintained and manned in Canada; this policy is now in a concrete form before the House, Mr. Guthrie having moved an amendment still undisposed of that the $35,000,000 asked by the government "be expended in Canada in the construction and equipment of naval forces."

The whole object of the opposition during the present debate has been to bring this issue as prominently as possible to the attention of the people, and this they STILL PROPOSE TO DO BY ALL CONSTITUTIONAL MEANS AT THEIR DISPOSAL.

ABOUT THE RULES.

It is stated on behalf of the government that the rules of the House are antiquated. These rules have grown to their present form through long centuries of struggle on behalf of freedom of speech. The late government persistently refused to alter them, but they were carefully revised only three years ago and unanimously adopted as they now stand.

LENGTH OF DISCUSSION.

It is also hinted on behalf of the government that the discussion was unduly lengthened before the vote on the second reading of the Naval Bill. A comparison of the discussion on this bill and the discussion on the Navy Bill in 1910, show this allegation to be absolutely unfounded in fact. The number of speeches delivered on the second reading of the present bill and the resolution on which it was founded is 77 (40 on the resolution, 37 on the bill) whereas the number of speeches on the second reading of the bill in 1910 was 86.

The bill was referred to the committee of the whole on the 28th of February, and a discussion on it once arose upon the cost of naval vessels of different classes. Certain figures were produced by the government, and as their accuracy was challenged by the opposition, the government promised to produce some further information at the next sitting. The House consequently adjourned after voting the first clause of the bill. On Monday, 3rd of March, the House went again into committee on the bill at 10.30 p. m., and the same discussion was resumed and carried on until 1.30 a. m., practically between Mr. Borden and Mr. Hazen for the government and Messrs. Pugsley, Macdonald and Carvell for the opposition.

BOB ROGERS' HAND.

At 1.30 a. m., Mr. Rogers, who had been out of the House, and who had taken no part in the discussion, came in and raised the point that such a discussion was out of order. He practically took the lead out of the hands of the leader. His point of order was maintained by the chairman, and it was insisted that section 2, which was under consideration, should be passed. It was then nearly 2.00 a. m. The opposition asked that at this late hour the House should adjourn. This was peremptorily refused, unless clause 2 was passed. The opposition would not submit to such intolerable and unreasonable dictation, and as a consequence the government kept the House sitting for a whole week, until the following Saturday; and again for another week, commencing the following Monday.

Consistently with the policy of the opposition Sir Wilfrid Laurier had moved in committee of the whole an amendment to clause 2, affirming that the $35,000,000 asked by the government, instead of being sent over to Great Britain, should be devoted to the speedy organization of a Canadian Naval Service in co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy, to which a sub amendment was moved by Mr. D. D. McKenzie, of Cape Breton, emphasizing but not dissenting from the amendment.

After two weeks of discussion on these amendments the Prime Minister policy has been made, while on only two occasions since the House opened have they asked for supply AND SUPPLY WAS AT ONCE GRANTED. Refusing thus to attend to these pressing matters of great importance to Canada they are trying to force upon the people this measure by extreme and arbitrary methods.

THE TWO METHODS.

In the working of Parliamentary institutions it has not unfrequently happened that deadlocks have occurred between the government and the opposition. Experience has shown that there are only two methods of providing a solution; one is the use of brute force, and the other is an appeal to the people.

Michelangelo.

Michelangelo while painting "The Last Judgment" fell from his scaffold and received a painful injury in the leg. He shut himself up and would not see any one. Bacio Rondini, a celebrated physician, came by accident to see him. He found all the doors closed. No one responding, he went into the cellar and came upstairs. He found Michelangelo in his room, resolved to die. His friend the physician would not leave him. He brought him out of the peculiar frame of mind into which he had fallen.

Might Have Been Better Put.

A missionary who had served in China for ten years paid what some of them probably considered an "objectionable" compliment to the female section of a fashionable London audience in the course of his references to the Chinese custom of foot binding. Remarking that there were 400,000,000 of people in China, at least half of whom were women and girls, he inquired, "Of that number how many do you think have nice large feet like the ladies whom I see before me?"

Long Lived Icelanders.

It would be interesting to know if any part of the world beats Iceland in the average length of life of its inhabitants. On an average the people of that island live to the age of 61.8 years, which is very nearly double the mean duration of human life as it was computed a generation ago. Sweden and Norway are regarded as very healthy countries, but Iceland takes the palm in longevity, the mean duration of life in Sweden being 50.02 years and in Norway 49.94 years.

Mme. de Stael is responsible for a contribution to the woman suffrage question which may interest those who have done and suffered for the cause. "I have no taste," said Napoleon in talking to her, "for women who meddle with politics." "You may perhaps be right," replied Mme. de Stael, "but since people have taken the freedom to cut off their heads on account of politics they ought at least to be allowed to understand why."—Westminster Gazette.

about the Government was lined up on the Bar with the liquor interests and that it expected to be financed by them at the next general election. Sir James denied this vigorously, but Mr. Rowell declared that if the Prime Minister did not know it he was about the only person in the Province who didn't.

A BURLESQUE HOUSE.

At the very time when it is rumored that owing to the amalgamation of the circuits the number of burlesque theatres in Toronto is to be reduced from two to one, the announcement is made by the Prime Minister that there is still another burlesque house, and that none other than the Legislature itself. Sir James was annoyed at a question Mr. Rowell had asked the Minister of Education about rumors reported to have been made by the latter regarding the possible introduction of closure into the Ontario House. Hon. Dr. Pyne denied the report, and Sir James took occasion to remark that the Leader of the Opposition was turning the House into a burlesque by the number of silly questions with which he was loading up the Order paper. Mr. Rowell knew perfectly well that the questions asked by him and his colleagues were pertinent and genuine, but he contented himself with remarking, much to the glee of the Opposition members, that if the House was being turned into a burlesque there was no person so much responsible as the Prime Minister himself.

It is passages of this sort that enliven the solemnity of the Legislature.

Training and Feeding Oxen.

Experience has demonstrated that Devon oxen are to be preferred to those of other breeds, owing to the fact that they are more active, says Hoard's Dairyman. Oxen from the Hereford and Sussex breeds have also proved themselves very good workers. Grade steers make very good oxen, but are a little more refined than they would be if they were not castrated. It is a general practice to use a yoke where a team is used, harness being feasible only where single animals are to be hitched. The training cannot be begun too young, but as a rule they are broken as yearlings and not put to heavy work until two years old. They can be trained by yoking two steers and hitching them to a log or some such object to be pulled around in an open lot. To teach the steers "gee and haw," it is necessary in some instances to use a halter on one of the animals for a short time. As a usual practice oxen are fed on grain and hay varying in amount according to their size and their work.

Care of Swine.

Two things which should be avoided with swine in cold weather are, first, do not let them sleep in or upon heating manure, because they become warm and then rush into the cold air, frequently contracting colds, coughs or severe pulmonary diseases that are sometimes fatal; second, bed them well in dry quarters where there is no draft of air blowing across them.

Don't use all the adjectives in the English vocabulary to sell a fifty cent hen. A buyer knows a liar.

Don't take soiled eggs to market. People judge you by the goods you sell.

BOWSER BEHAVES

But His Wife Worries Until He Starts In Again.

SHE KEEPS TRACK OF HIM.

And Is Hounded by a Premonition of Coming Disaster, but the Clouds Are Dispelled When He Shows Up With the Usual Grouch.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

MR. BOWSER'S ways are not always just as I could wish for, but I don't want to lose him.

He has his oddities, but he means
well.

He's got an idea that if he shouts
"Womau!" at me and waves his arms
about he'll make me cuddle down.

He comes home with this scheme
and that, and everything looks rosy to him until I bring figures to bear, but I am glad he is no pessimist.

I can generally catch on to his moods
almost at once, but there are times
when he is unreadable and worries me—when he isn't Mr. Bowser at all.
When he got up last Sunday morning
he didn't yawn and stretch and grunt and growl. On the contrary, he was unusually silent, and, though his socks,
collar, tie and collar buttons were scattered about the room as usual, he recovered them without once declaring that this was the worst run house in America. He usually growls about his Sunday breakfast, but on this occasion he hadn't a word of fault to find.
I made no suggestion about his accompanying me to church and was utterly amazed when he announced his intention. I looked for a row when he came to dress, but there was none. He

HE WASN'T EVEN THREATENED.

seldom or never puts on a fresh collar
without blasting the laundryman's eyes, but on this occasion he even spoke of the work being nicely done.
He didn't find the church too cold or too hot, the singing too loud or too

he left me dumb with astonishment. I felt a premonition of coming disaster
all day, and when a street boy threw a stone and broke a window I got ready to face the inevitable. There was no inevitable, however. When Mr. Bowser came home he said that such accidents were liable to happen at any time, and that I mustn't worry over it.
In going to the theater we had to stand up in the car and were elbowed and jostled and the conductor beat us out of 15 cents in making change, but Mr.
Bowser made no kick. He was much interested in the play, and when he returned home he said he didn't know
when he had spent such a pleasant evening. I was delighted, of course, but yet I felt a chill at my heart. Something awful is surely going to happen.

Thursday Morning.—I got up before
Mr. Bowser was awake and deliberately hid his socks in order to hear that old familiar kick from him, but it didn't come. He kept looking until he found them, and laughingly remarked that the rats must have been frisking with them. I charged the cook to overdo his breakfast egg, but he did not seem to notice it. I scattered five or six clothespins in the front hall, expecting him to break out about reckless extravagance and the poorhouse,
but he smiled blandly as he walked over them. I called to see the family doctor during the afternoon, but he could not clear up the mystery. He had known such sudden changes to mean death within a few days, and he advised me to be watchful. When Mr.
Bowser came home from the office I had a poor dinner for him, and I also informed him that the coal was out
and a water pipe leaking, but the soft, sweet smile never left his face. During the evening he said that he had made a fool of himself a hundred times over since our marriage, but that he had solemnly determined to keep clear of all fads in the future. The cook called me downstairs and wanted to know if
Mr. Bowser wasn't going to carry on any more, and when I said it was doubtful she gave me a week's notice.
Things had become too lonesome for her.

A Dream of Tragedy.

Friday.—Same peaceful getting out of bed and eating breakfast. I insisted that he couldn't be well, but he replied that his health was never better.
He had hardly left the house before I telephoned his symptoms to mother and asked her opinion. She replied that he would probably try suicide
within a week, and that I had better
lock up all the poison in the house.
When he came home at night I was lying on the lounge and pretending to have a terrible headache. Instead of saying that it served me right for over-eating or going around barefoot and then whistling and stamping around to add to my suffering, he sat down and told me how sorry he was and did all he could to alleviate the pain. I had to get up and eat dinner with him and pretend to be cured. We had a little spelling school during the evening,
and, though I spelled him down a dozen times, he only smiled over it. I told him the cook had broken two plates
that day, but he replied that all crockery was made to be broken. I asked for a new hat and he gave me the money without a word about the poorhouse. I tried to get him to go to the club, but he said he preferred his

A RESOURCEFUL REPTILE.

The Pesky Joint Snake Cleverly Fooled
Uncle Henry.

At the village grocery the evening
gossip had turned upon snakes. There had been the usual tales of deus of reptiles unearthed by excavators, of hoop snakes taking their tails in their mouths and rolling rapidly down hill,
and the like. Through it all "Uncle Henry" Carpenter sat silent, with a look of tolerant superiority upon his face.

"Have you ever had any experiences with snakes, Uncle Henry?" asked one of the listeners.

"Waal, I did have a queer thing happen to me about thirty year ago," Uncle Henry responded. "The minister happened in to dinner one day, and Sary Ann had me go to the chicken yard and kill our last rooster. While he was floppin' round, as chickens do

of these pesky joint snakes. In no time I had him broke in two at every

He read aloud to me in the evening, and, though I corrected his pronunciation a few times, he did not lose his temper. I am somewhat worried over the change in him.

Mrs. B. is Worried.

Monday.—No kick as Mr. Bowser got up this morning. His collar button had rolled under the bureau, and he got down on his hands and knees and hunted it up without a swear word; found no fault with breakfast, although I thought the oatmeal was overdone; left the house in what seemed a happy frame of mind, and when he returned to dinner he brought no new fad with him. He sat down and read a book nearly all the evening, and when I showed him the gas bill that had been handed in during the day he remarked that it was very moderate for the time of year. I looked at him in amazement, but he smiled in return. Two politicians called to ask him to run for mayor, but he quietly refused, and would not even go to the nearest saloon to talk matters over. He complimented me on the way I manage the house and inquired if my pin money was sufficient to carry me along. I wonder if anything is going to happen?

Tuesday.—No kicks in the morning; no kicks at breakfast. The coffee was surely a little off, but Mr. Bowser said nothing about firing the cook through the window. He wore his old hat away by mistake, but he did not come home and blow me up about it. I was rather expecting to see him bring home a fire escape, a burglar alarm or a new idea in medicine chests, but he brought me a box of candy instead. The cook has observed his singular change and is getting nervous over it. She says she had an uncle who made just such a sudden change and died within a week. No kicks during the evening. We played euchre, and I bent him eight games out of ten, but he did not call me a scoundrel and cheat. Indeed, he frankly acknowledged that I was too much for him. A faker called at a late hour to try to sell Mr. Bowser a snide watch, but he wasn't even threatened. I have almost a mind to consult the family doctor about it.

A Premonition.

Wednesday.—Still no kicks as he got out of bed. As he came down to breakfast I saw the cat look at him in a strange way, and the cook was really frustrated. No kicks over breakfast. As he went away he said he would bring home tickets for the theater, and that day, but he replied that all cockery was made to be broken. I asked for a new hat and he gave me the money without a word about the poorhouse. I tried to get him to go to the club, but he said he preferred his own home. The cook went upstairs very much afraid, and I went to bed to dream of tragedies.

Saturday.—Still no more morning kicks—no breakfast kicks. Mr. Bowser had only left the house when the cook packed up and followed. She said there were ghosts about. I telegraphed for mother to come, but she answered that it was impossible. I called on the doctor again, but he said we could do nothing. I never put in a worse day in my life, and I was really ill when Mr. Bowser's step was heard at last. My heart bounded as I heard him dragging his feet. I thrilled as he banged the door open. I jumped up with a laugh as he flung down his hat in the hall. I realized that he was Mr. Bowser again. He stood there in the hall glaring around, and as I stepped into view he began:

"Woman, by the horn spoon, I want to know whether this is a poorhouse or a cooper shop!"

Mr. B. Redivivus.

Then I fell upon his shoulder and wept. He had returned to himself. He was no longer some one else, but the real, genuine Bowser, and I sang a song of glad thanksgiving as he continued:

"You have driven me to the dead line, Mrs. Bowser, and I suggest that my lawyer see your lawyer and have a divorce arraged for us as quietly as possible."

"Oh, I'm so glad to hear you say that!" I replied as I hugged him the tighter.

"You are, are you? Then you are ready for a divorce?"

"Then—then it's like old times to hear you bluffing."

"Bluffing? I'll show you!"

"Please do. Find fault with the cook."

"Hang her!"

"And the coal."

"You waste it to spite me."

"And the gas bill!"

"You—you burn it all day."

"And now call mother names."

"Durn her hide!"

"And now—now."

"Look here, woman! What the devil does this mean?" he asked as he held me off to get a look at me.

"Why—why you have been so quiet for a week that I thought—thought you would have to go to what they call the bughouse!"

"Oh, Lord!" he answered, and after a hearty laugh he kissed me right before the cook and the cat. I am a happy woman. Mr. Bowser is—Mr. Bowser again.

"Waal, it was simple enough when ye stop to think. The jint's of that snake had all jined together again, and when they couldn't find their own head they jest took the rooster's, which I'd left layin' handy."

There was a moment's silence. When the conversation was resumed it no longer dealt with snakes. — Youth's Companion.

SHE WANTED A MASTER.

The Way a Woman of Montenegro Selected a Husband.

The Montenegrin woman wishes not only to be the mother of men, but the wife of a man. She holds to a high handed husband, to one who will be master in his own house.

Here is the story of the wooing of Gordanne:

Gordanne was the beautiful daughter of an innkeeper. Her suitors were many, and it was time for her to wed. She promised to make her choice among three suitors and summoned them all to her father's house.

First it was a youth gloved and cravatted who during a week end at Cattaro had acquired the elegancies of city life. "Excuse me," he said, with a polite doffing of his hat as she met him at the doorway. "Will you let me pass?" Gordanne stepped aside, but as she did so she murmured, "You will never be my husband."

The second, a comfortable farmer, was less polite. "Let me in," he said, pushing past the girl. "Neither shall you ever call me wife," said the girl to herself.

Then came the third, who said nothing, but, seizing Gordanne by the arm, flung her aside and entered the house as if already its master. "That," sighed the innkeeper's daughter, "is a true Montenegrin. He is the husband for me." Of such stuff, after all, are the mothers of heroes made.—Paris Letter in London Telegraph.

The Domestic Economist.

There are other housewives who are as calculating as she who is celebrated in the Manchester Guardian, but not many of them have the daring to carry off their frugality so triumphantly.

An excellent Manchester lady frequently invites her friends to tea, but she does not furnish her table lavishly. When her guests have eaten all the bread and butter and cookies and realize that the meal is over, she looks brightly at the empty dishes.

"Well, now," she says, in triumphant tones, "haven't I judged your appetites exactly?"

Obituary.

On Monday, March 10th, after suffering nearly two years with paralysis, there passed away at her home Mrs. John H. Unger. During her long illness, nothing that medical skill or kind and loving friends could do to restore her or alleviate her suffering, was left undone. Another hand was laid upon her to bear her away to a well-earned reward of rest and happiness. To mourn the loss of a loving wife and a most devoted mother are left her husband, three sons, Schuyler and Edison at Hasica, Sask., and Gerald at home, two daughters, Ella, at home, and Pearl, at Ottawa. The family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement.

I. O. D. E.

The U. E. Loyalist Chapter, I. O. D. E., held an open meeting in the Town Hall on Monday evening last. The 1st Vice-Regent, Mrs. Madden, and Miss Helen Grange were on the platform with the Regent, Mrs. Harshaw, who presided, opening the meeting with a few appropriate introductory remarks, after which the programme began with a gay duet by Miss Lineau and Miss J. McGreer. "Sons of Briton," was sung by Mr. Fletcher with much spirit and vim. Miss Nesbitt rendered three numbers very sweetly and acceptably. Two fine quartettes, Kipling's "Recessional" and "O Canada" were given by Messrs. Nesbitt, Black, Steacy and Fletcher, whose voices blended admirably. Mr. Nesbitt's fine tenor adding much to the enjoyment of the numbers. A piano solo brilliantly played by Mrs. Stewart was much enjoyed. The first part of the programme closed with an interesting lecture by Miss Helen Grange, on some famous cathedrals of the North of England. She gave a brief history of church architecture from its earliest form—the Basilica—through the Grecian, Roman and Gothic styles, up to the classical, of which St. Paul's Cathedral is a good example. With the aid of views of the interiors and exteriors, the lecture pointed out in detail the changes made from time to time, and explained the evolution of church architecture, which has given to England such fine structures as York Minister, Lincoln Durham, Herford, Canterbury and other famous Cathedrals. Although Miss Grange had visited the churches described, her lecture was evidently the result of much thought and research work, it was most interesting and instructive, and was listened to with rapt attention by the appreciative audience. The programme closed with the singing of the National anthem. An artistic and attractive candy booth in charge of Miss F. Johnson, assisted by Miss C. Grange and Miss M. Simpson was well patronized during the intermission. The platform decorated with flags was in

One of the stock arguments constantly urged against Local Option that it cannot be effective in town, unless all the neighbors are also under Local Option buttal of this objection it is to note what the Pioneer say in regard to three towns are close together, one of "dry." These three towns Lima and Fostoria are some miles apart and have a population of 15, 30 and 10 thousand respectively. Of these three Findlay, population of 15000, is "dry" year the arrests for drunkenness in these three places were F Lima, 1196 and Fostoria, 208 Fostoria with only two third inhabitants as Findlay has four times as many arrests and arrests for other offences a similar proportion. This show quite clearly that the urged argument that there is drunkenness in towns under Option as those under license when there are "wet" to at hand.

The street and rain storms of the past few days have so loaded the trees and wires with ice that on Thursday morning branches began to snap in every direction. On all the streets of the town branches of trees were scattered and numbers of valuable trees in all parts of the town are ruined. The breaking branches tied up the Seymour lines all over the town, breaking wires and cross arms and completely tying up the service. Telephone and telegraph companies are also tied up badly. Many of the service wires of the Telephone Co., are broken. Enormous damage must be done to fruit trees all through the district. Belleville, Trenton and Deseronto ere also about as badly hit as Napanee. The Seymour Co., resumed a partial service on Thursday evening.

Trinity Church Notes.

The Easter services were well attended and were full of interest. The Sunday School attended the morning service in a body and led the musical part of the service. The song service in the evening was specially good. The choir was ably assisted by Mr. Simmons with violin. The choir and church as a whole feel under obligations to Mr. Simmons for the many times that he has given valuable help on special occasions. Mr. Roland Daly sang "The ninety and nine" in fine voice. The pastor will preach missionary services in Deseronto next Sunday. Rev. R. Burns, of Deseronto, will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Church. This will be Mr. Burns' first appearance in Trinity Church. He is an excellent preacher. Be sure and hear him. The nationality entertainment under the auspices of the Young People's Association will be held on Monday evening, April 7th. This will be the treat of the season. Keep the date in mind and look out for the programme.

Mr. Kenneth Grieve had the misfortune to break his leg on Wednesday morning by slipping on the ice at Mr. M. C. Bogart's farm. He was brought home by Mr. McCaul and is doing as well as could be expected.

THE VERY FIRST RESURRECTION

Distinction Between Jesus' Resurrection and All Others.

Pastor Russell Shows Scripturally the Difference Between Awakening the Dead and Resurrecting the Dead—Several Were Awakened Before Jesus, But He Was the First Resurrected—The Church's Resurrection.

St. Louis Mo., March 23.—Pastor Russell spoke twice here to-day. We report his address on the Resurrection from the text, "He should be the first that should rise from the dead." (Acts 26: 23.) With startling clearness the speaker pointed out that Jesus' resurrection was the very first, as the text declared. He led his hearers back to Eden, and let them hear the Divine penalty for sin—"Dying, thou shalt die." He showed that this dying process operated in Adam for nine hundred thirty years before its action was complete. Adam's children, humanity, never had Adam's original perfection; for they were fallen at the time of birth. On this subject both Old and New Testaments agree.

Next the Pastor showed that the Greek word anastasis, translated resurrection, means a raising up again—the word again implying a former standard. That standard is the image and likeness of God, which none of Adam's children have fully possessed, because he lost it.

"Not Possible to Be Holden."

St. Peter declares that it was not possible for death to hold Jesus. (Acts 2:24.) He was perfect. It was the Father's will that Jesus should demonstrate His obedience even unto death. Hence it was not possible for Jesus to remain under the power of death, and God raised Him on the third day.

Jesus was perfect on the spirit plane, before He exchanged the spirit nature for the human, to become man's Redeemer. He never forfeited His right to life. He merely laid it down in proof of His loyalty to the Father's will. Hence His resurrection meant His resuscitation in perfection. But it was not God's will that He should return to perfection of human nature; for He had used that nature for the purpose intended. He was raised from the power of death to the very highest plane of spirit being; namely, the Divine nature.

The Pastor asked his audience to contrast Jesus' resurrection with the awakening of Jairus' daughter; the widow of Nain's son; Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha; or any of the awakenings recorded in the Old Testament. These were nothing more than mere awakenings from the sleep of death. They were not, therefore, resurrections.

The resurrection of any of these sleeping ones would have meant much more than was accomplished in

SINGING CRICKETS.

They Are Kept In Cages Like Canary Birds In Japan.

Selling crickets is a lucrative business in Japan, where the insects are valued for their songs and kept in cages like canary birds. In Tokyo there are two wholesale merchants who send their agents into the streets of the large cities. The insects are carried in little bamboo cages. A good seller clears approximately from 80 cents to a dollar a day. An insect valued for its music brings from 2 to 7 cents. The Kusa hibari is the most valuable of all the songsters, but the common cricket and the grasshopper are considered excellent singers.

The singers are collected from the fields in September, before laying time. They are taken from the grass and shut up in glass jars. Soon after they are imprisoned the females lay their eggs and die almost immediately afterward. The jars containing them are kept in a temperature of 80 degrees C.

The young come forth in March.

The loss of eggs is about 10 per cent. The male is the singer. He only is an object of commerce, and from a hundred eggs the cultivator, despite all his care, has only fifty salable insects. The lot of the locust is a martyrdom from birth to death. The locust is the toy of the Japanese child. He is caught on bamboo twigs rubbed with a gluey substance and tormented according to the ignorance or the cruelty of his keeper. The life of the singing insect never exceeds a term of five weeks.—Hornet's

ENGAGEMENT RINGS

SCARED THE LEOPARD.

A Blow With an Umbrella Routed the Savage Brute.

A remarkable encounter with a leopard is related in "Sport on the Nilgiris," Mr. F. W. F. Fletcher:

"One April afternoon I had been over to see a friend about four miles away, and shortly after I left his bungalow on my return home it began to rain. As riding was uncomfortable in the wet, I got off my nag and gave him to the housekeeper. After a mile the rain stopped, and the sun came out, but I shut my umbrella and determined to walk the rest of the way home. Before me trotted five little terriers, behind me came the syce leading my horse. We reached a sharp bend in the road, and the doggies had disappeared round it when I saw the whole pack rushing back full tilt, with a leopard at the heels of the hindmost dog.

"Just as they reached me, the leopard seized Flirt, and at the same moment I landed him a blow on the head with all my force with the umbrella, which flew into splinters. The leopard dropped the dog, but his impetus was so great that he could not stop, and, rushing past me, he knocked my syce clean off his legs. Then he jumped into the grass bordering the road.

"The change that came over our peaceful procession in that one instant was astounding. There stood I in the road, flabbergasted, with a broken umbrella handle in my hand; my syce was roaring blue murder on his back; my horse was bolting for home like a runaway engine, and my five little dogs were shivering at my feet. I picked up Flirt and carried her home. She was badly bitten in the neck, but frequent applications of phenyl soon made the wounds heal, and in a fortnight or so she was well again. But she was a changed dog. She would come out with me, but she always stuck to my heels, and nothing would induce her to enter the scrub or join the other dogs in a hunt of any kind."

A New Negligee.

Few articles of the wardrobe are more alluring to the girl who likes dainty things than the "tea gown" as they are unfortunately called. Many of these gowns are really simple little dresses and are quite appropriate for Sunday night supper or an informal dinner. A fetching little creation which won the heart of a pretty debutante is of blue taffeta, a blue as deep as the heavens. It is given a one piece effect by a wide shirring at the waist, which made it possible to forego the corsets, as the wearer wished to be ideally comfortable. The skirt is slashed on one side and outlined with a piping of yellow taffeta silk. The dearest lingerie skirt, all lacy ruffles with mysterious blue ribbons and pink rosebuds, can be seen as the wearer moves her feet, and the result is entrancing.

The waist fastens at one side and is outlined with piping. The frock is almost harsh in its severity, but it is most becoming to the owner who has a pretty neck. A new feature of this house gown is the long sleeve attached to a low shoulder seam and finished at the wrist with lace. A dear little cap of lace with blue and yellow flowers tucked into the filmy lace at the sides completed the picture.

It is caught on a bamboo twig rubbed with a gluey substance and tormented according to the ignorance or the cruelty of his keeper. The life of the singing insect never exceeds a term of five weeks.—Harper's Weekly.

FISH AND THEIR FOOD.

Queer Ways by Which Some of the Toothless Species Get a Meal.

The curious ways in which fishes eat form quite a study. Some fishes have teeth and some have none at all. In some the teeth are found upon the tongue, in some in the throat and in some in the stomach. Some draw in their food by suction; the sturgeon is one of this class. The jellyfish absorbs its food by wrapping its body around the prey it covets. The starfish fastens itself to its victim, turns its stomach wrong side out and engulfs its dinner without the formality of swallowing it through a mouth first.

So there are all sorts of methods for those regularly toothless, and the fishes which have teeth show almost as great a diversity in the number, style and arrangement of them. The ray or skate "has a mouth set transversely across its head, the jaws working with a rolling motion like two hands set back to back. In the jaws are three rows of flat teeth, set like a mosaic pavement, and between these rolling jaws the fish crushes oysters and other mollusks like so many nuts."

The carp's teeth are set back in the pharynx, so that it actually masticates its food in its throat, while the sea urchin has five teeth surrounding its stomach and working with a peculiar centralized motion, which makes them do as good service as if they numbered hundreds.—Harper's Young People.

An Anodyne.

"An anodyne," patiently explained a well known physician to a woman patient, "is a delusion. And medicine that soothes pain has this drawback—it relieves the attack, but the next attack comes on much sooner. Understand, I'll cure your headache, but you're bound to have another headache in a day or two."

The woman pondered a bit.

"I know just what you mean, doctor," she said. "I've noticed it about Henry, my husband, you know. A doctor prescribed whisky for his cough. My husband says it cured his cough quicker than anything else ever did, but I notice that he gets a new cough almost every week now."—Louisville Times.

Seen in a Menagerie.

"I have heard of haughty strides and graceful glides, but the heroine of this melodrama has a sort of zoological walk."

"What kind of walk is that?"

"Why, the author speaks of her pursuing her catlike tread with a dogged determination!"

Something in Keeping.

"You pamper this cat too much," said the veterinarian. "You keep him too much in the house."

"But, doctor, this is a Persian cat—cost $4,000."

"Well, build him a mahogany woodshed to gambol on."—Pittsburgh Post.

more than mere awakenings from the sleep of death. They were not, therefore, resurrections.

The resurrection of any of these sleeping ones would have meant much more than was accomplished in them. It would have meant their restoration to the full image and likeness of God, lost in Eden. As it was, the awakening ones merely had the advantage of a few more years in the present life, and then fell asleep again, to await the glorious rising to the full perfection from which the race fell.

The First (Chief) Resurrection.

The Pastor made it clear that the Church of Christ consists of the truly consecrated in all denominations and some outside of denominational fences, which are barriers not authorized by Scriptures. He quotes Philippians 3:10 and other Scriptures which show that the True Church are to have a share with Jesus in His Resurrection. The inherited blemishes of these are covered through the merit of Jesus, justifying them. This justification permits their being accepted of God as His children.

The Pastor seemed to give the thought that in the Divine Purpose a foreordained number of the Church class must suffer with Christ before the Millennium begins. Their sufferings are not vicarious, as were Jesus', nor necessary for the redemption of the world, as were our Lord's. The sufferings are necessary to prove their loyalty to God, and to demonstrate their worthiness of joint-heirship with Jesus. The Church's suffering is their dying to earthly conditions and ambitions, as did Jesus. His faithful followers will experience a similarly glorious resurrection to a higher nature—the Divine. See Jesus' words in Revelation 25:6

Easter and the Passover.

Pastor Russell says that the word Easter occurs only once in our Version Bible, and is a mistranslation. It should be rendered Passover. Easter was a heathen festival honoring the goddess of Spring. The name was transferred to the Passover celebration of the early Church, in honor of our Lord's resurrection.

Whatever the word originally meant, it stands now as a synonym for the glorious resurrection of the world's Redeemer from death and from human nature to glory, honor and immortality—the Divine nature. The resurrection of Jesus is the guarantee for the resurrection of "the Church, which is His Body." It also assures us of the world's resurrection—that an opportunity for everlasting life will be given to all mankind through Messiah's Kingdom.

NOBLEST SCIENCE

the Higher Critics.

Pastor Russell in a College City Advocates Bible as Text Book—Value of Learning—Its Cost—Various Kinds of Knowledge—The Most Important One—The Best Teacher—The Most Successful Pupils—Graduation Day.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Ithaca, N. Y.,
March 16.—Pastor
Russell is here;
and in view of this being the seat of Cornell University
he took as a text
the words of the philosopher: "Wisdom from Above,
the noblest science,
the best instruction." It must be said, however, that the Pastor used various Scriptures,
any one of which

might have served for a text.

Once the colleges represented, not merely secular education, but the religious sentiment of their founders, usually religious men. To-day, however, colleges are ashamed to acknowledge any religious affiliations; and although they represent high moral principles, nevertheless, they are hot-beds of infidelity—disbelief in the Bible as the Divinely-inspired Revelation. This condition is deplorable.

In the Pastor's opinion the great institutions of learning, so well equipped for the inculcation of faith in God, are doing more to overthrow faith than are all other influences combined. The increase of knowledge he believed to be accountable for the increase of vice. He explained that the undermining of faith in the Bible as the Word of God and the inculcation of the Evolution theory
tend to destroy all faith in a personal God and in rewards and punishments from Him. One of the most peculiar things was that very wealthy men
have richly endowed leading colleges,
thereby destroying faith and unintentionally leading mankind to social revolution and to the precipice of anarchy.

Sympathy For Higher Critics.

Nothing in the Pastor's words indicated condemnation; on the contrary,
he manifested a deep sympathy for those entangled in the snares of Oc-cultism and Evolution. He had been entangled once himself, he said, but had gotten free. Had he gone so far as to doubt the existence of God, he believed that he would have been as lost in Evolution as are many of the noble men occupying college chairs.

The Pastor believes the difficulty is that many cannot accept the Bible as the inspired Record. So also he had once rejected it; for he had thought it to be in harmony with the absurd creeds of the Dark Ages. Now he is a most firm believer in the inspiration of the Bible. One of the surprising things his Bible study has revealed is that the Bible supports none of the creeds; and that none of the creeds or sects use all of the Bible. Each sect has selected doctrines from the Word of God, and uses them in its

SEED BRANCH

CIRCULAR TO RETAIL SEED
DEALERS.

During the past few years the Seed
Branch has been endeavoring to effect improvement in the seed trade by educational work with farmers and seed dealers, supplemented by the enforcement of the Seed Control Act.
With few exceptions, both the wholesale and retail dealers have endeavored to conduct their business in conformity with the law, which has made it possible to keep the number of prosecutions very low. This season
it has been exceedingly difficult for seedsmen to collect sufficient stocks of high grade seed, owing to the very short crop, and the trade will doubtless present many unusual and trying features. Under these somewhat adverse conditions, your best efforts to observe the provisions of the Act will be required.

All timothy, red clover, alsike and alfalfa seed must be graded and marked Extra No. 1, No. 2, or No. 3,
according to the quality. If the seed is obtained from a wholesale firm properly marked, it is unnecessary to have it retested or remarked as the wholesaler is held responsible for the correctness of the grade. If the seed is obtained locally, a representative sample should be sent to the seed laboratory for test and each bag plainly marked with the grade. Seed inspectors are instructed to see that the grading regulations are strictly enforced.

Seed that will not grade No. 3 cannot legally be sold except for export or cleaning. This applies to farmers as well as seed dealers. Farmers selling seed that is below grade No. 3 to their neighbors for seeding or to dealers on the understanding that it is to be retailled for seeding without recleaning are liable to prosecution; and every effort will be made to apply the Act to farmers as strictly as to seed merchants.

Paper packets of vegetable and flower seed put up since 1911 must be marked showing the year in which they were filled. Retailers should protect themselves by handling only packets that are properly marked as inspectors are instructed to report all cases where unmarked packets are being offered for sale.

Seed grain, clover and grass seed as well as root and vegetable seeds,
whether in sealed packets or bulk,
must be capable of germinating in the proportion of at least two-thirds of the percentage standard of vitality for good seed of the kind. Seed that will not germinate in this proportion must things his Bible study has revealed is that the Bible supports none of the creeds; and that none of the creeds or sects use all of the Bible. Each sect has selected doctrines from the Word of God, and uses these in its own defence. But each finds there teachings which do not fit in with its creed.

Evidently none of the sects manufactured the Bible. Had the Calvinists done so, they would have omitted texts teaching Free Grace. Armenians would have omitted Election. Catholics would have added something to teach the immaculate conception, indulgences, high and low mass, holy water, holy candles, apostolic succession, etc. All would have put in texts telling about the Trinity.

All would have omitted text teaching that the dead are asleep, to awaken in the resurrection morning. Indeed, it is most difficult for them to explain how there can be a resurrection, if those who seem to die are really more alive than ever. Evidently the Bible was not made by man.

My prayer and effort is that thinking Christians may see that this wonderful Book, while out of harmony with the creeds, is fully in harmony with itself. The great Plan of salvation which the Bible sets forth towers far above all the efforts of puny men, represented in the creeds of Christendom. The glorious fullness of the Bible Message could not have come from elsewhere than Above.

Learning's True Value and Cost.

Learning along all lines of present day instruction is surely valuable. The applied sciences are doing much for the world. But while very important and helpful to human progress, these alone are not sufficient. The human mind must have a theory respecting its future destiny and the object of its present existence. The search for knowledge along these lines is usually referred to Plato and Socrates. None seem to think of progress in mental philosophy beyond these giants of the past. Yet, if the Evolution theory be true, these men were much nearer the monkey state than we are to-day.

The Pastor sought to impress the propriety of beginning Bible study afresh, ignoring the creeds of the Dark Ages, and permitting the old Book to explain itself. He pointed out, however, that the Bible specifically declares that without the Holy Spirit it cannot be fully and clearly understood. Those who consecrate their lives to God and thus enter the School of Christ will be taught of Him.

He believes that unless the highest organs of the human brain—those pertaining to religion and morality—be cultivated, the student is poorly prepared to withstand the storms of life.

whether in sealed packets or bulk, must be capable of germinating in the proportion of at least two-thirds of the percentage standard of vitality for good seed of the kind. Seed that will not germinate in this proportion must be plainly marked showing the actual percentage of seeds capable of germinating. ## TOMATO CULTURE.

Almost anyone with a garden or farm in a temperate climate can grow tomatoes with greater or less success but there is a great difference between the extent and quality of the crops grown by different persons in the same locality. These differences are due to several causes among which the varieties grown and methods of cultivation practised are perhaps the chief.

According to experiments carried on for years at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa, Earlians, of which there are several strains, is the best early sort, but Bonny Best, Chalks' Early Jewell are also good early kinds. Of later varieties Matchless Trophy, Livingston's Globe and Plentiful rank high.

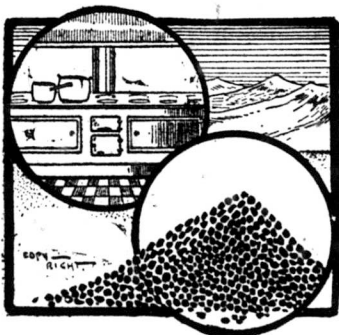

It is the early fruit that makes the profit. In growing plants what should be aimed at is the production of a stocky, sturdy plant which will have some fruit set upon it when set in the field. After planting the chief work is cultivation which should be done both ways in the plantation.

In order to protect tomato plants from diseases, of which there are several, they should be repeatedly sprayed, even when quite young, with Bordeaux mixture. These and many other points, which cover practically the whole field of tomato culture in the green house as well as in the garden and field, are fully treated in pamphlet No. 10 of the Central Experimental Farm prepared by the Dominion Horticulturist, Mr. W. T. Macoun. This work is for free distribution to all who apply for it to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Miss Harriet was divided between fear of an almost certain accident and the wish to see this young man ride. There was something about this easy, loose knit figure which inspired confidence. There was something, too—just what she could not say—that recalled a memory of plunging cattle, a face that loomed through clouds of dust, a steady arm that swept her from the saddle, and then—oh, nonsense! She liked this smooth shaven Englishman, and yet—she could like an unshaven cowboy too.

When they finished luncheon they repaired to the paddock, and Hawk was led from the stable, two groomings hanging warily to the double halter straps. He was a powerful roan, with a glossy coat and massive shoulders. The small head told of blood and spirit. The ears lay back, and the white of his eyes gleaming wickedly seemed to bear out Mr. Renwyck's statement as to his nasty temper.

"Umph!" said Richard critically. "Looks as if he wanted to put the gloves on with us, doesn't he?" He stepped forward, running his hand along Hawk's muscle quivering withers. "Jumper?"

"Yes, sir," returned the appreciative head groom: "four foot eight, sir, with a clean hoof."

Richard nodded.

"Just saddle him, will you, my good man? I fancy Hawk and I will hit it off together nicely."

The horse was led into the center of the spongy paddock, where the dangerous task of saddling was completed. Richard rejected the bit chosen by the groom, selecting another with a deeper curb. Then he buckled on a pair of spurs and looked to the girth himself. He sighed for a high pommelled cowboy saddle, but was forced to content himself with a flat seated English riding affair, in which, Mr. Renwyck remarked, he would feel more at home doubtless.

The Texan turned, smiling, to his host.

"Half an hour, did you say, Mr. Renwyck? I'm afraid you are about to lose a valuable horse."

"And I'm afraid," muttered the other under his breath, "that the house of lords is about to lose a valuable member."

"No fear," said Richard softly, catching his remark.

"Be careful of the stirrup, sir," warned the deferential groom. "He'll shy when you raise your foot, sir."

Richard thanked the man, stepped near the horse quietly and for a mo-

ed. Richard jumped. He alighted upon his feet, ran backward to avoid the vicious hoofs, and as the horse rose he mounted with a flying vault, while from his audience came a cheer that was music to the vanity of man and a further irritation to the horse. The roan repeated his experiment the second time, but with the same result, then once more bolted on the run, this time for the four foot fence of the paddock. To dash his rider against a rough oak post was a most commendable design in a horse, but the rider was otherwise disposed. The Texan gave his steed a loose, free rein, but as he neared the barrier checked him sharply and applied the spur. Hawk quivered, crouched, then took the fence like a soaring bird.

Outside a smooth road stretched away till lost behind the crest of a distant hill. Up this highway the big roan thundered as though old Tam o' Shanter cowered upon his back, with a horde of witches streaming far out behind.

The heart of Richard had been singing with a conqueror's joy, and doubtless his reckless tongue might have taken up the song but for an unexpected check. As he landed in the road beyond the fence he spied a little red faced man who had clapped applause with two plump white hands. It was not so much the gentleman himself that troubled Richard's mind, but the thought of a doubtful compliment shouted down the wind:

"Very good seat for an Englishman, my lord!"

For Richard of course sat on his horse like a plains rider who loathes the up and down motion of England and the riding school.

For a long time Miss Renwyck and her father awaited their guest's return in great anxiety until they were relieved at last by the sight of him coming down the road at an easy canter, evidently master of the situation.

"He rides well, father, doesn't he?"

"He does," the old gentleman replied and added something which qualified a firm opinion.

Richard soon reached the paddock fence, forcing his jaded mount to take it for a second time, crossed the field and dismounted at Miss Harriet's side. The horse stood still, his head drooped again, but this time in utter weariness, not mischief. His glossy coat was streaked with foam, his widespread nostrils inflamed and red, while his barrel heaved to the pant of his labored breath. He shivered in defeat and offered no resentment of his rider's arm about his neck in a rough caress. "Look here, young man," said Mr. Renwyck's greeting, "where did you was then old enough to get into my breeches without her able assistance. The conditions remain unchanged. Sit down and talk to me about London."

Gingerly availing himself of the edge of a chair on account of this concession of inexperience, the valet detailed an account of his master's movements for the past three years. On the whole, the story was interesting, though distinctly unflattering at times to a member of the nobility. Outwardly Bills was as expressionless as a sphinx; inwardly he enjoyed his own narrative hugely. It was seldom he had so glorious an opportunity of laying bare his private opinions of his whilom master.

"Umph!" grunted Richard as he tried on one of Lord Croyland's dinner jackets. "So I am responsible for three entanglements and one scandal of which I still wear honorable scars. Drop that part of it. I'm a seeker after general information only."

Bills looked disappointed, but strove to earn his salary on less tasteful lines. He was a shrewd man, and his knowledge of the requirements of Richard's case led him to give valuable information. He described Hyde park, Piccadilly, the Strand and many other haunts of the fashionable set; also a club or two and various prominent

English people likely to be mentioned in general conversation.

Richard was possessed of a retentive memory, which he now stored full of odds and ends which would help him pass muster, provided, of course, he did not run foul of the initiated, in which case he shuddered to think of the possibilities. His alleged sojourn in the United States, especially his winter in Texas, accounted in a measure for occasional slips, but even with this in his favor the position was a trying one.

There was another feature of the enterprise which troubled him sorely. It was comparatively easy not to seem to appreciate a joke and to intersperse small talk with a few stock phrases delivered in a British drawl, but when he looked into the eyes of the woman he loved he longed with all his heart to be for once and all time an American. He sighed for the sweep of the wide free plains, for a gallop with her across the fragrant prairie, to speak to her in his natural native tongue and to tell her he loved her as he loved his land.

"Woolsey," he sighed, and it amused him to notice how the valet resented the use of his Christian name, "I'm afraid, after all, I shall have to ask you to tie this neck thing. The ones I had at home were ready made and could be cinched up properly with a practical buckle at the back."

The valet deftly adjusted the bow, then gave a pull here and a poke there to the dinner suit, to which the master submitted meekly.

"My lord," observed Bills, surveying his charge with an expert's eyes, "askin' your lordship's pardon for presumin' to mention it, the—er—the other one never looked quite so convincin', my lord."

"Thank you, cardinal."

"Thank you, sir, an' I ain't no judge if the lady don't think so too."

Richard wheeled upon him sharply.

"Lady? What lady?"

"W'y, Miss Renwyck, sir, the lady wot strikes me as—"

her sentences in a short, je cato, with a deal of unnecessary phrasia, until her conversation ed some one playing telegraph with a vichy siphon.

Richard, who against his cination was forced to tak stately Miss Schermerly, was ing vaguely who "Michael" when suddenly his heart sto the entrance of the gentleman and again in his ears sou haunting echo of that doubtful ment:

ment stroked his neck. The animal stood with drooping head and a look of docile innocence which to a practiced eye was a precursor of certain mischief. There was an instant's pause. The young man gathered up the reins, stooped slightly, then suddenly shot upward, landing squarely in the saddle and slipping his feet into the swinging stirrups. It was a familiar range trick and deftly carried out.

It is difficult to say which were the more astonished, the grooms, Mr. Renwyck or Hawk himself, who squatted, reared and wheeled sharply to the left. Failing in the first attempt to rid himself of an unwelcome burden, the animal reared again, spinning on the pivot of his heels, but stopped at the stab of steel between his ribs.

Then began a battle which caused Miss Renwyck to hold her breath in admiration and alarm and her mother nearly to faint with terror. Her father forgot his wager and his dignity and danced in excitement, shouting encouragement to the daring rider. The roan, now thoroughly enraged, sought by every equine trick he knew to unseat his master, but in vain. If he bolted to right or left he felt a weight swing inward at the turn; if he reared two maddening spurs were dug into his flanks, while the effort to lower his head was checked by an iron hand.

Presently the horse stood still, as though he were thinking deeply, then suddenly plunged away on a dead straight line. For twenty yards he raced, then spread out his legs and slid, in the budding hope that his rider might continue on, but in this he was bitterly disappointed. He felt the agony of a cruel curb that gripped his tongue and found himself forced back upon his haunches, while his tenacious rider still remained astride his back.

Now, Hawk was not a single minded brute and had, so to speak, another project up his sleeve. Without warning he dropped upon the turf and rolled breath. He snatched the man's arm and offered no resentment of his rider's arm about his neck in a rough caress.

"Look here, young man," said Mr. Renwyck's greeting, "where did you learn to ride like that?"

"I was uncommonly keen on riding as a boy," said Richard, falling into a lazy drawl, "and, besides, I stayed for several months in Texas, you know."

Miss Harriet started and fixed a searching gaze on the speaker's face, but her father nodded gravely.

"Umph!" he returned. "I see. Good instructors, those fellows on the plains, eh?"

"Well, rather," assented Richard, with a laugh. "My trainer was a gentleman known colloquially as Dog Faced Sam, though I dare say his parents never bothered to christen him at all. Jolly sort, those—er—cow chaps, 'pon my word!"

There was a short silence; then Mr. Renwyck blurted out abruptly: "Well, the horse is yours, of course. You rode him for a full half hour."

Richard took out his watch, glanced at it and closed it with a snap and a sigh.

"Twenty-eight minutes!" he exclaimed in well assumed dismay. "By Jove, I've lost my wager!"

"Hold on there," cried the old gentleman, but laughing in spite of his earnestness, "you can't squirm out of it that way. Why, bless my soul, you could have stuck on him till he dropped dead. No, Lord Croyland, I'm not a welsher, nor do I shy at a margin of two minutes. No, sir, Hawk is yours!"

For answer Richard made a twitch of his thumb and finger, opened the horse's mouth and pointed to a badly swollen gum.

"He has a bad tooth, Mr. Renwyck, which perhaps accounts for his ugly temper. Fill it and you'll find a very different animal."

"What has that to do with the bet?" demanded Mr. Renwyck obstinately.

Richard fastened in his monocle after a desperate struggle and smiled and instantly lost his labor, for whenever he smiled it dropped out again.

"Couldn't think of accepting a different animal, y' know. Really, as Bills says, it wouldn't hit off with my conscience."

"Croyland," said the old gentleman, thrusting out his hand, "I didn't take to you much at first. But if you'll come with me to the house I'll introduce you to something that I keep strictly for friends."

Mr. Renwyck led the way with his wife, while Miss Harriet and the guest came sauntering after him.

"Lord Croyland," the young lady whispered, "I don't admire you especially because you know how to manage a horse—I've known other men who could do that—but—"

"But what?"

"I do admire you for knowing how to manage father. May I decorate you with this rose?"

CHAPTER VII.

WHILE dressing for dinner after a delightful afternoon with Harriet Renwyck.

Richard took his first lesson in modern English history and geography. The well trained Bills attempted to take full charge of the toilet, but upon this the new master put his foot down firmly.

"Bills," he said, "just about eighteen years ago, if I remember right, my nurse came to the conclusion that I

at the lady don't think so too.

Richard wheeled upon him sharply.

"Lady? What lady?"

"Why, Miss Renwyck, sir, the lady wot strikes me as"—

"Stop right there!" commanded Richard sternly. "There are certain subjects which are not discussed between a gentleman and his servant. This is one of them. Please remember it."

"Thank you, Mr.—er—I mean 'm' lord," said the valet respectfully. "Very good, sir."

In sizing up his man the astute Bills had made a grave mistake, wherein he found much food for reflection regarding his future line of conduct. He had long since learned to manage his former master by various cunning little artifices, but this wide awake Texan, with his square chin and steely blue eyes, was quite another proposition. Although Bills had divined the object of this masquerade, it did not seem as if he would profit much by it, and yet there must be some way in which he could turn it to his own advantage eventually, he was sure.

Meanwhile the adventurer descended into the drawing room and was presented to several other members of the small house party who had arrived by the late afternoon train for the week end. First there was Miss Caroline Schermerly, half sister to Mr. Renwyck and belonging to the haute noblesse of old Manhattan. Flatterers described her as a lady of uncertain age, although there was little doubt as to her personal antiquity. She was tall, somewhat angular and incased in a formal coat of blue blooded sleet, which had never thawed sufficiently to admit of a husband being warmed to her side. She approved of ears. They represented caste; therefore she promptly took Richard under her molting wing, to the vast discomfiture of the gentleman thus appropriated.

Then there was Miss Imogene Chittendon, a bosom friend of Miss Renwyck, newly released from boarding school and radiant in the glamour of her first season out. She was blond, fluffy, giggly, enthusiastic, delivering

For the benefit of his guests Renwyck recounted the af feat of horsemanship, and found himself upon the defense. Fortunately he knew the details of Lord Croyland's venture, cattle and told the story with effect, thus accounting for his to ride anything that ran on yet all the while he felt the gaze of Mr. Corrigan's little eyes, which made him most comfortable.

When this ordeal was passed Chittendon forced him into a complication.

"Oh, Lord Croyland," she said from her seat on the opposite side of the table, "won't you please tell me about England? I've never you know, and I'm just dying to know the places I've read of in books."

"My dear young lady," Richard turned, with unnatural languor, "I wouldn't find it half so jolly in my own country. Really, you know, becoming such a good American, I shall never return to again."

He was not to get out of this easily, however, for the lady laid him with difficult questions wished with all his heart that them at least were confined to the Tower of London, while to the fourth of bronchos and things he understood. Then Richard took a hand.

"Lord Croyland," he began, slipping his port, "it has been years since I was in London, but I have always retained a most full recollection of Hyde Park and a few changes there, I suppose?"

Richard brightened visibly, a subject on which the astute had drilled him well. He could, of it, he thought, with little to slip. Mr. Corrigan went on:

"Quite a park, as I remember. 'Vast,' agreed Richard, who had been a little more as to dimensions.

"I was especially impressed by Mr. Corrigan, with delusive intelligence, "with that splendid statue of a lion, which stands at the entrance. You are familiar with the course, Lord Croyland?"

"Oh, quite!" assented Richard, screwing in his monocle. "Uncle Michael straight in with never a tremor in his course it is quite the finest bit I've ever seen."

Mr. Corrigan seemed puzzled. "Bronze?" he murmured. "No, that's strange. I don't remember the impression that it was marble." He looked up with a sigh. "I dare say I'm old, my lord."

Richard began to feel beads of perspiration gathering upon his forehead, but dared not call attention to his mopping.

"It is quite weather-stained, you know," he explained, with a calm, "and perhaps—well, you know the name is Thornton."

"But what I don't understand," exclaimed Mr. Renwyck, "is why you Englishmen ever put up a statue of Napoleon at all. Seems to me that bating him as you did it was rather a curious thing to do."

"Not at all," said Richard desperately; "prisoner, y'know—St. Helena—and all that sort of thing—er—magnanimous."

Uncle Michael did not seem convinced and was about to ask more questions when Mr. Renwyck turned upon him sharply.

"Michael, you are doing this for the sake of argument. I don't believe you know anything about it, and, what is more, I think Lord Croylard is humoring you for the sake of politeness. I'll prove it." He turned to Richard. "My boy, I ought to have warned you in advance. My brother-in-law is a crotchety old lawyer who has never got over his bad habits. Tell me—honestly now—is there a statue of Napoleon Bonaparte in Hyde park at all?"

"No," smiled Richard, greatly relieved at this turn, "there is not."

"Who is it, then?"

"Wellington," said Richard, with triumphant carelessness, although he really did not know whether there was such a statue or not. But then neither did any one else at the table, although all but Miss Chittenden had visited England, some of them many times. The company laughed at Mr. Corrigan's discomfiture, while the victim himself seemed to enjoy it with the keenest zest. That dangerous incident was closed.

The dinner was finished at last, and Mr. Corrigan, pleading an appointment, departed, greatly to Richard's relief. The rest of the evening was spent in company with the ladies, for the young man's efforts to single out one in particular were invariably frustrated by the other three. It was not until nearly 11 that he had a short half hour with her alone, but in this he was repaid for all his tribulations. Miss Harriet was dressed in an exquisite pale blue gown, modestly revealing a neck and shoulders which to Richard were the most beautiful in all the world. They sat on the front veranda overlooking the river, she in a low wicker chair and he on the steps at her feet. Behind him were clusters of wistaria blooms, while beyond in the darkness the first of the fireflies twinkled like stars. To them came the nighttime scents and the murmur of the wind across the mighty Hudson on its journey to the sea.

Miss Harriet told him of her trip to Texas and of the gallant cowboy who had saved her life, while Richard listened with a bounding heart. He longed to claim a hero's place, to confess his deception and tell her the plain, bare truth. And yet he paused. To confess would involve disclosing the reason of his deceit, and he dare not risk the chance of losing her yet. She was young, romantic. The very daring of a lover's bold design might appeal to her; but, on the other hand, it was better to wait till he had won her heart than to ruin all by foolish precipitance.

"And what sort of chap was this cowboy?" he asked her presently.

"Oh, splendid!" she answered, with enthusiasm. "He was tall and straight and strong. Why, he lifted me as though I had been a child and set me

"Croylard," said his host impressively, "there is a little matter which I should like to talk over with you, and I have purposely waited until the ladies retired."

Richard fancied there was a certain grimness in Mr. Renwyck's tone and jumped to a swift conclusion. He was found out. He wished to avoid a scene if possible, but from what his father had told him of Mr. Renwyck's temper he could gather little hope.

"Certainly," he answered evenly, rather relieved that the expected break was coming. "Shall we sit here on the porch?"

"No," said the old gentleman; "I don't care to be overheard by any of the servants. If you don't mind walking we'll move away from the house."

Richard was convinced. He was sure that when Jacob Renwyck expressed a candid opinion of any one—especially an impostor—he would find it difficult to speak in whispers. It was just as well, on the whole, and Richard preferred to receive his malediction out of earshot of his ladylove. He rose with alacrity, therefore, and followed his host, who led the way across the lawn toward a little observatory or pleasure house on the crest of a bluff overlooking the moonlit Hudson.

At another time the young man might have enjoyed the view of the great calm river sweeping past the shadowy hills on the farther side, but under the circumstances the scene did not appeal to him. There were other thoughts which occupied his mind. Mr. Renwyck walked with his hands clasped behind him, and Richard watched his every move. Physically the Texan was more than a match for Mr. Renwyck, but the latter had probably armed himself for the occasion, a trifling precaution which would not have escaped the southerner. And Richard then and there resolved never again to put on a pair of trousers that had no pistol pocket in them. What did those eastern tailors know about the requirements of a gentleman anyway? But then it flashed into his mind that Mr. Renwyck was probably no better provided than he in that particular—reassuring thought!

Suddenly Mr. Renwyck unclasped his hands and transferred one of them to his breast pocket. Richard caught sight of a bulging projection—it was there then!

He was on the point of seizing his host's wrist when the latter brought forth a brown covered case.

"Have a cigar," he said, with crafty cordiality, and Richard accepted, with his gaze still concentrated on Mr. Renwyck's hands.

"Light?"

"Thank you, no," the Texan answered. "I'll smoke it dry for awhile, if you don't mind."

The trick was an old one. He had seen it worked along the Rio Grande. A Mexican had presented a cheroot to a cow puncher, who, after lighting it, found himself looking into the muzzle of an overgrown Colt's—and a Texan learns to profit by observation as well as experience.

Mr. Renwyck now invited his guest to a seat beside him on a smooth flat stone on the edge of the cliff. Richard accepted, but cautiously slid his foot to a point behind Mr. Renwyck's leg, with the aim of overturning his enemy backward at the first sign of

"A local company has been organized and styles itself the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company." And Richard recognized the company with a thrill of excitement. "They're going to get an appropriation from the legislature for making a deep water harbor at Matagorda City. They own all the land in the vicinity and the right of way for a branch line to connect with the railroad systems of Texas at Houston. Now, this scheme, all else being equal, would be a sweet, juicy plum for its promoters. But things are not all equal. I have learned its details, and I propose to smash it."

He spoke with a savage emphasis, which revealed his hatred and his determination. If hell has no fury like a woman scorned, a friend turned enemy is almost as venomous.

"How are you going to do it?" asked Richard, with growing anxiety.

"There chances to be a rival company in the field, my boy, backed by money—influence—pull. In fact, I organized it to make a deep water harbor at Longmatt, on San Antonio bay. I rather think the legislative appropriation will go there."

"And is Longmatt better adapted for a deep water harbor than Matagorda City?"

"Much better."

"Why?"

"Because I own all the land at Longmatt, and for various reasons that—er—do credit to its business acumen the committee on railroads in the legislature agrees with me."

"Which means," suggested Richard, "that the legislature is doing business at the same old stand."

Mr. Renwyck laughed.

"That sounds very American for a foreigner, but suppose we put it a little more delicately. The legislature through this committee can be persuaded."

"And the other company does not know this?"

"Not a whisper of it."

"But won't it find out from the legislature?"

"It won't. I am certain of those Texas statesmen. They have been—fixed."

"But I thought"—began Richard, then stopped suddenly, remembering that he was not supposed to be up in American railroad affairs.

"Well?"

"—that such matters required much time—red tape—and all that sort of thing, you know."

"Not a bit of it," answered the old gentleman, rubbing his hands in anticipated pleasure. "Now, listen. I have devised this opposition scheme myself and know what I'm talking about. In just two weeks from now the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company's bill for a deep water harbor at Matagorda City will be introduced in the legislature with a great flourish of trumpets and referred to the railroad committee—my committee, that is. At the same time a small and unostentatious little bill substituting Longmatt for Matagorda City will also be quietly slipped in by some of my agents. "And you saw all that in five minutes?" he asked eagerly.

"In five minutes!" she exclaimed, surprised. "How do you know how long it was?"

"Oh—er—a perfectly natural inference," he stammered, hunting for cover desperately.

"Well, it was a short time," she sighed.

"And yet you did not learn his name?"

Miss Harriet shook her head.

"No. We came away at once, and I had no chance. You see, I only saw him for a moment—that is, after he put me down—and he was in such a hurry to catch his cows."

Richard smiled into the wistaria vine and was silent for a time.

"I suppose," he began presently, "that the young fellow was of the ordinary type of cowboy we see so frequently on"—

"No," interrupted Miss Harriet, with a decisiveness that pleased him to the quick; "he was nothing of the sort. Of course he was roughly dressed, as they all are, but a gentleman is a gentleman even in a flannel shirt, and 'chaps' don't they call them? Do you know, Lord Croyland, he reminds me in many ways of you. He—no, no," she added hastily, "I don't mean that. He—was quite different. You see, he was an American."

"Lucky beggar!" observed the pseudo earl, with a heavy sigh. "Miss Renwyck, I, too, would love to become an American if—won't you teach me how?"

"I?" she laughed. "Yes, I will, if you promise to follow instructions implicitly."

"Done!" he answered. "I'm ready for my first lesson. How will you begin?"

She thought for a moment, then looked down upon him implishly.

"First I think I should like to destroy your monocle with—with a croquet mallet."

Richard screwed it into his eye with renewed vigor and stared up at her through it with an excellent simulacrum of a wondering English incomprehension, stammering out with delightful vagueness:

"D'y'e mean while I am—ah—wearing it, Miss Renwyck?"

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER Miss Renwyck had retired Richard lighted a cigarette and sat alone on the veranda, turning over in his mind the events of his first crowded day and his plans for the future campaign. Mr. Michael Corrigan troubled him. This little fat man was nobody's fool, and no one could tell what sort of mischief was being hatched behind those piercing eyes, which, if they continued to twinkle about the Renwyck place, would shortly discover many things. Richard sighed and flicked the stump of his cigarette away. He rose and was about to pass into the house when he was met in the doorway by Mr. Renwyck.

accepted, but cautiously slid his foot to a point behind Mr. Renwyck's leg, with the aim of overturning his enemy backward at the first sign of treachery.

"Croyland," he began abruptly, "I've taken a fancy to you somehow, and I'm going to prove it by putting you on the inside of a little business deal."

"A business deal?" gasped Richard in unfeigned surprise.

"Yes," nodded the old gentleman, puffing thoughtfully at his cigar. "Of course I don't know how you are fixed financially, nor have I any intention of asking impertinent questions, but if you care to come with me in a transaction in which I myself have invested largely I can put you in the way of making quite a snug little sum."

Richard withdrew his foot from behind Mr. Renwyck's leg and in the darkness strove to kick himself. Conscience had made of him not exactly a coward, but a careful skater on thin ice.

"That's very clever of you, indeed," he answered, lighting his perfect and gazing out across the Hudson. "Is it what you call—er—a flier?"

"Well, no," said the old financier. "It's more than that. It's a dead certainty, and I'm on the inside. Let me explain. To begin with, it is a deep water harbor enterprise in the state of Texas."

tie bill substituting Longmatt for Matagorda City will also be quietly slipped in by some of my agents. No one knows me in this connection at all, and of course you will respect my confidence?"

"Certainly."

"Well, this bill will be referred and forgotten by everybody until the last minute, when the original bill will be amended, and the large appropriation will go to Longmatt, too near the end of the session for any change. The stockholders of the opposite company are so certain of success that their first mortgage bonds have been issued, quietly taken up among themselves and are rising in value every day. But wait. When the Longmatt scheme is assured the bonds of the company won't be worth a cent. I shall buy their right of way to Houston for a song, and—well, the state of Texas will be greatly benefited, while the other fellows pay!"

"Pay Texas?" asked Richard innocently.

KITCHEN SHOWER.

Household Articles Masquerading in Many Amusing Disguises.

A kitchen shower may be lifted out of the commonplace and be made interesting, even artistic and certainly amusing by dressing up each article given until it looks like something else.

The costuming needed for such masquerading is plenty of crape paper, bolts of cheap baby ribbon and a paper of pins.

A clotheshorse, two or three ply, could be hung on each side with brown paper to resemble a screen of hard wood. Even more amusing would be a decorated screen with caricatures drawn or pasted to the flat paper surface.

The rolling pin may be rolled with blue or pink paper tied on the handles with fluffy bows and have a veil neatly fastened round it to represent a veil roll.

Clothesline can be rolled round and round and woven into place with baby ribbon until it looks like one of the woven mats used for front steps.

Decorate buckets and wooden pails with paper, frills and paper flowers until they resemble gay trash baskets.

Get a half dozen flat wire egg beaters, tie the handles of two together with light wire and make a wire hook to resemble a coat hanger. Wind the entire framework with strips of crape paper and tie on a huge tissue paper bow. Give a set of three of the hangers.

Fashion a jardiniere made from the lid of a wooden box, in which put, point down, a fence of paring knives with the handles up. Weave in strips of crape paper in several colors and leave only the tips of the handles showing as a border. Fill the center with a potted plant.

Egg beaters and potato mashers make amusing dolls, with heads made from potatoes, apples or painted rags and a body made, so the utensil will stand, from rolls of cardboard. Dress in tissue paper hat and gown.

Clothespins may be turned into amusing dolls with crape paper, using marshmallows for heads, each decorated with features in black ink. To prevent these dolls erect fill a long baking dish with moss or sand and stick the pins into it. Drape the pan with double frills of neutral tinted paper, so as not to detract from the gayety of the dolls.

It adds to the fun if the hostess gives prizes for the best disguise, the most artistic and the most grotesque; also prizes for those of her guests who get greatest and the second greatest list of utensils before the masquerade is revealed.

"Futurist" Hats Latest in Paris.

One of the striking features of spring millinery, says a Paris rumor, will be "futurist" hats. The futurist painters have succeeded in covering themselves with ridicule, but Parisian milliners believe that better luck is in store for futurist hats.

These will be of no particular shape or form, but some of the promised color combinations are almost too daring to believe. For instance, with a hat made of plait straw, leghorn or horsehair will be seen bright blue, cerise, indigo and emerald combined with Span-

Fruit and flowers will come back to favor as trimmings, and the apple in all shades of green, red and yellow will be held in special honor. A chic spring model is a black hat with two apples, one green and the other yellow. Plums, cherries and peaches will also be used by milliners.

Ribbons, which were banned in women's hats last year at the same time as flowers, will come into their own again for decorative purposes.

The smart spring turban in the cut rises to a peak at the front or shoots out into a propeller at the back. This hat of the former type is in the Indian princess style, with a high question mark trimming placed directly in the front of the hat.

For the Fireside.

Nothing is more useful as a fireside log basket than one made of willow. These baskets are especially attractive, inasmuch as they can be stained to suit one's room.

Helen Gould's fortune is said to exceed $30,000,000.

Eva Rosenbaum, aged fifteen, of Kansas City, fluently speaks Russian, Hebrew, French, German and English. She is a night school student.

Mrs. E. G. Reakirt of St. Louis is rearing her son, now five years old, in ignorance of the fact that at twenty-one he is to inherit $1,000,000.

Miss Mary Gray Peck has given up her position on the faculty of a university to become press chairman of the Woman Suffrage State association in Ohio.

MRS. WILSON'S RECIPES.

A Few of the President Elect's Favorite Dishes.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the next president of the United States, is, like most southern women, a good cook. The following recipes are used by Mrs. Wilson when she is ambitious of setting before her famous husband some of his culinary favorites:

Georgia Indian Pudding.—Place four cupfuls of sweet rich milk into a double boiler. Moisten in a little of the milk four rounded tablespoonfuls of yellow Indian meal and add to the milk when hot, stirring it well. Then add half a cupful of molasses, a little salt, a tablespoonful of ground ginger and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Stir well and add four rounded tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix well and then pour into a baking dish with a pint of cold milk added and well stirred in. Bake in a slow oven three hours. Sometimes raisins are added. Serve with hard sauce.

Waffles.—Into four cupfuls of well sifted flour rub a heaping tablespoonful of butter and salt well. Break three eggs, placing the yolks in one bowl and the whites in another. Beat each stiffly. Add three cupfuls of sweet milk to the yolks and then to the mixture add the buttered flour, beating briskly. Continue to beat for five minutes. Into the center of this batter then place two rounded teaspoonfuls of baking powder and then beat again vigorously. Lastly, beat in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and bake immediately in waffle irons. To be served with butter and hot maple sirup.

Hominy Fritters.—To two cupfuls of cold boiled hominy add a cupful of rich cream and beat. Add two well beaten eggs and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat to a smooth batter, and then drop in large tablespoonfuls into very hot fat and fry brown on both sides.

THE PARCEL POST.

Advantages Given to the Housewife by Uncle Sam's New Service.

The new parcel post is a great convenience to the housekeeper in town as well as making a market without the aid of the middleman for the farmer. People living in towns and cities by this means may order foods fresh from the farm and thereby save time money and trouble.

As an example of the various good points of the parcel post delivery take the shipment of eggs, which a housekeeper can get fresh from the farm every morning—eggs that were laid the previous day.

Take, for instance, a family of two. Allowing that they would consume six eggs a day, says Mrs. Kate Howe in a recent article, they could order a four day supply for a little more than they cost and receive them in perfect condition. In most cases the farmer pays the postage, but he probably adds that amount to the price of eggs.

THE MODERN HEROINE

A Self-Reliant Lady Who Has led the "Years of Discretion."

Styles in heroines change as frequently as fashions in gowns. To-day the leading our popular novels, quite genuine flesh and blood ladies who don't pretend to be, are a cheerful, energetic none the less alluring because don't go in for scenes and no longer does a heroine sniff situations. Trembling lips and faltering sions have quite gone out. femininity in to-day's novel solete.

A gradual development of the modern heroine character has to age. Possibly we haven't the culminating point yet—but we may class everything in which heroine is not a grandmother "juvenile"—but heroines are older than they used to be. aged matrons of fascinating single young women of 30, about, as beautiful as they liant, and charming old man kind that seem to have been taken out of lavender scent—form, to a great extent, the ine army whose life stories w until the wee sma' hours. no age limit to the modern heroine.

Perhaps the most striking about the present heroines efficiency. They are fast dy won't fade or wear off. They mo't practical, capable, "get-set of people anywhere on the the earth—except the heroes!

They don't go around ansations; they don't go in brow isms and ologies, or and fetishes; but they are with good mentalities, and them in some practical, resuing way. Poverty is no c even a cause of caste lower the heroine of the modern she is dependent on herself likely to be poor. She gets goes after something and remarkably.

TO FILL THE WINTER EGG BASKET.

Winter is when many wonder why their hens don't lay. They get gobs of eggs in the cheap season, but get left when the winter egg brings the long green. If these disappointed folks investigate and find what their hens get in the warm season that they lack now and furnish the same or a good substitute the problem is solved. They will discover that spring and summer afford variety; that, beside grains fed, the hen has succulent greens, juicy worms and bugs and exercise, and thus the ration is well balanced between protein and carbohydrates so that the hen gets plenty of egg maker and body builder.

Now, let sprouted oats, cut clover, alfalfa, cabbage, beets, substitute for greens; fresh cut bone, or beef scrap represent bugs and worms and a grain ration of equal parts wheat, oats and corn and a crumbly mash of equal parts wheat midds, ground oats, ground corn and two parts bran be the remainder. These coupled with exercise for the grain in litter, and you have a winter menu we have never seen fail for lots of eggs.

Try this for a day's fare: At dawn scatter a good handful of grain for each hen in the litter and two for the rooster; at 10 feed plenty of greens. Cut clover and alfalfa go best steamed in the mash. Raw vegetables are best for hens. At noon serve cut bone. Feed sparingly at first. At 4 serve crumbly mash all they want. Beef scrap, about 10 per cent of bulk, is best fed in mash and should be soaked awhile before mixing. Of course this quantity isn't arbitrary. Hen's appetite and condition must be guided. There should always be some grain in litter to reward her efforts.

These remarks do not apply to hens housed on the hogpen plan, to ante-diluvian relics nor to birds of the fat Biddy bustle style. To make them lay use the ax.

THE SWINEHERD.

A sow that is raised on concentrated food without sufficient exercise will never make a profitable brood sow.

Sows will grow sluggish and lazy if allowed to grow too fat, and this condition will work havoc at farrowing time.

The more comfortable you keep your hogs the more profit they will return to you.

Feed the boar for vigor, not for fat, and let exercise enter into his development.

Use the dishwasher for fertilizing purposes and give the pigs pure, clean water to drink.

Give the hogs every day all the clover hay they will eat.

Sugar beets are a most valuable addition to the pig ration.

If the hogs squeal, find out why. Comfortable hogs never squeal. There is no money in squeals.—Farm Journal.

WINTERING THE FLOCK.

Sheep Require Proper Feed and Sensible Care to Thrive.

The farmer who carries his first flock through the winter is apt to run up against the rocks of inexperience.

If the owner is wise he will first consider the condition of his flock. For instance, ewes that are pregnant will not receive the same attention as ewes that are not, nor will young lambs being raised for ewes receive the same treatment as the others. This calls for three different bunches. To secure the best results these three classes should be separated—that is, the pregnant ewes by themselves, ewes not pregnant and wethers for fattening together, and lambs for breeding purposes in another flock. When all are allowed to run together none seems to make the progress it ought to. Knocked around, the young lambs will not make the growth necessary to develop the good, healthy breeding ewes, the pregnant ewes will not bring forth as strong, healthy young, nor will those being fattened for market make the growth they should.

The ewe flock should start into winter in good, thrifty condition—in fact, what many farmers call fat—and during the winter they should be so handled and fed that they continue thrifty. Consideration must be given the lamb which the ewe is growing. Feeds

WILLIAMSTOWN, ONT., JULY 27th, 1910

"I have much pleasure in testifying to the almost marvellous benefit I have derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. I was a lifelong sufferer from Chronic Constipation, and the only medicine I ever secured to do me any real good was 'Fruit-a-tives'. This medicine cured me when everything else failed. Also, last spring, I had a severe attack of Bladder Trouble coupled with Kidney Trouble, and 'Fruit-a-tives' cured these complaints for me, when the physicians attending me had practically given me up.

I am now over eighty years of age and I can strongly recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' for Chronic Constipation and Bladder and Kidney Troubles"

CORN STOVER FOR STEER FEEDING

On many of our farms there is an unnecessary amount of labor expended in husking the corn and then feeding the corn and stover separately to the live stock, writes an Ohio farmer in National Stockman. Much of this useless labor might be saved. Professor Mumford of the Illinois station, when feeding steers clover hay, found shock corn supplemented with ear corn and oilmeal superior to shelled corn and oilmeal.

The result, substantiated by common experience, shows that corn need not be husked for the best results in steer feeding, and in somewhat less measure

The word "bill" is applied to the mouth of water fowl, though some

English fanciers are trying to revive interest in the Game. As he dare not be bred for cock fights, they are advocating that this bird be turned loose in the forests to breed like the jungle fowl, and they claim that in a few years he will regain the power to fly
and make as good sport as pheasant hunting.

The market demands that capons
have no combs, so it is the practice
at time of operation to dub the birds.
In doing this start at the back and cut front, and cut even with the skull
and make a smooth job of it.

A single poultry farm in New Jersey marketed 1,121,478 eggs last year,
and a reliable firm of accountants investigated their claims and found the owners made $19,484.83 profits in a single year. Yes, the American hen is a money maker when treated right.

Pumpkins are enjoyed by the hens
in winter and should be cut in half and hung up in the coop. The soft,
sweet meat helps to make their crops
spongy. They have a feeding value, are cheap and beneficial.

Joseph Gulick, a notorious Pennsylvania chicken thief, was recently shot
while stealing chickens and sent to the Eastern penitentiary for a minimum term of six and a maximum term of eleven years, plus $100 fine and costs.
This is his ninth conviction for chick-

be sentenced to an insane asylum for life.

There is much to be learned at the fairs and shows about modern poultry
culture, and it is at these many deter-

get the inspiration to go into the business. These exhibitions are becoming a wonder for size and beautiful qual-

of this great branch of agriculture.

A committee of three was appointed by the American Poultry association to investigate the extent of the United States government's co-operation with poultrymen. We are curious to know just how much the government has done to promote the billion dollar
poultry industry and hope the committee gets all the facts.

Sheep and Fertility.

The sheep is just as efficient a manure spreader as he is a manure maker.
On hillside where coarser animal waste would hardly stick long enough to do the ground any good sheep droppings take the place of a specially prepared fertilizer.

Look to the Lame Ewe.

Catch the lame ewe and see if she isn't in the first stages of foot rot. Looks so from here, though it may be that her hoof only needs trimming.

The pure bred Hampshire yearling of the University of Idaho. He was champion wether at the Oregon and Washington state fairs of 1912

in competition with Southdowns, Shropshires and Horned Dorsets.
At the time the photograph was taken Buxom Boy weighed 25 pounds. He was bred by the University of Idaho and was dropped in February, 1911.

As producers of high grade beef
the Aberdeen Angus breed takes second place to no other. Indeed, judging by the honors won at the international live stock shows in recent years, the Angus is to the fore.
However, the Herefords, Shorthorns and Galloways are splendid beef makers, and the admirers of each particular breed and enumerate points in which their choice excels. Since their introduction into this country the daddies have made a great record both in the show
ring and on the butcher's block.
The Angus steer shown is a fine
specimen of this popular breed.

which produce growth should be supplied and also plenty of exercise. Both are important.

One method which gives generally satisfactory results is to have a shed to which there is a good sized yard adjacent. Here once a day, preferably in the morning, cornstalks may be fed upon the ground and good clean straw
in racks. For the evening feed clover hay is best, being fed in the racks in the shed. A feed of grain, two parts oats and one part corn, one-half pound per head, is a good supplement to the morning feed. If the hay should be coarse or contain much timothy a good portion of bran, say a quarter in bulk,
can profitably be added.

Pure fresh water should be accessible
at all times. If it is some little distance from the yard, just so that it is easily accessible, it will give the ewes good exercise in traveling to it. The water must be clean.

The yard is necessary, for in it the ewes can secure needed exercise, and it should be for their sole use. Do not turn in the cows and hogs and horses and expect the ewes to thrive. Then,
too, one must see that there are no
sharp corners nor small doors nor openings in which the ewes can crowd or injure themselves. This yard should be so located that it is protected from the prevailing wind, and the ewes
should have access to it at all times.

Care of Fall Calves.

Fall calves will require a little more care and attention. However, fresh skim milk, alfalfa and silage will keep them growing nicely. When spring comes they will be ready to be turned out on grass and will be large enough to get along nicely without additional food. Calves that are intended for sale have a distinct advantage if they are dropped in the fall. They are appearance to any prospective buyer.

Butter From Butter Fat.

Butter fat will make more pounds of butter than you have fat, because the butter contains decidedly pure fat, water and salt and casein. There are about 16 per cent of water in butter, 1 to 1½ per cent of casein and from 1 to 3 per cent of salt.

Economy of Sheep.

Sheep do not require an expensive building. The essentials of such a building are freedom from dampness and drafts and a protection from storms in the roughest weather. No other farm animal can ever compete with the sheep. A flock of sheep demands comparatively little labor. They grind their own grain, another factor
aiding the economy of labor as well as that of maintenance. They are the best grain grinders we have. The weed seeds consumed by sheep are never known to grow afterward. This is not true of other farm animals.

"The County Sheriff," a popular and powerful play is touring the country with its usual success, and is to be presented here on Monday, April 7th. The play is from the pen of Lem B. Parker, and is said to be as bright, interesting, witty and dramatically delightful as anything he has heretofore written. The plot is original, holding one's interest to the very last. There are many amusing situations and interesting scenes. A very elaborate production is utilized and everything that is essential to make the production a complete one is carried.

The regular meeting of the Napanee Franchise League was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on March 19th and was very well attended, even a few of the sterner sex venturing up. The president, Miss Nellie Root, opened the meeting with a few words of thanks for honorable position. As the secretary had not yet arrived, Miss Dickey brought up the suggestion of a Literature Committee and Misses Annie Herrington and Vera Ballance were appointed. The two recitations by Misses Minnie Parks and Margaret Hudgins were well given and heartily appreciated by all present. Mr. Beverly Simpson gave a decidedly anti-suffrage speech, supporting his argument by quotations from the Bible and current papers, and Mr. Bogart Wilson read many articles gleaned from the press, all of which were intended to show how wrong is Woman Suffrage. The meeting was highly animated and the Napanee Franchise League shows every promise of flourishing progress.

Presbyterian Union of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies within the limits of the Kingston presbytery, held one of the brightest convention since its organization, sixteen years ago, in Deseronto, on Good Friday. Delegates from the different districts were in attendance in goodly numbers. The union supports an ordained missionary, Rev. D. Fiske in North Hastings county, during the winter months. The treasurer's report showed finances to be in a satisfactory condition. Rev. J. C. Robertson, B. D., Toronto, general secretary of Young People's Societies and Sunday school of Presbyterian church in Canada, gave inspiring and instructive addresses on "Standard of Excellence in Young People's and Sunday School Work." Rev. H. Gracey, Gananoque, also spoke on the missionary problem. Rev. J. W. McIntosh, Kingston, followed Mr. Robertson in discussion of Sunday school and Young People's Society topics. Kingston was the choice for the convention for Good Friday, 1914, sessions to be held in Cooke's church. The following officers were appointed: President, William Moore, Latta; vice-president William MacIntosh, Belleville; secretary, H. W. Newman, Kingston; treasurer, D. A. Shaw, Kingston, executive committee, Rev. H. Gracey (Gananoque), Rev. J. A. Shaver (Picton), Rev. A. S. Kerr (Belleville), Rev. J. Rattray (Tweed), Rev. D. Fiske, Thomas Donnelly (Deseronto), Miss Hyland (Napanee), Miss Fairbairn (Newburgh).

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum. Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business. We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire. They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling. What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspection at
